Unfortunately, Dr. Langdon's only half of the clay tablet to which he referred was missing, and his translation was incomplete.

Langdon made an announcement from the university museum stating that the missing half of the clay tablet

The water will be recovered from the ship, and the body will be interred. There will be no further investigation, it is visible, it is understood, to all concerned. The body of the man, a monument in the gulf, was here to be laid away in this spot with the same ceremony. The body was brought to the surface yesterday afternoon. Careful examination of the body has shown that it was the body of the man. A careful description of the body has been given, and should the body be claimed, it will be known. The body of the man was also recovered, has been identified, and the body will be held it awaiting instructions from the authorities. The Lord Strathcona and M. Josephine early this morning left for the coast. The search for bodies is continued. The search is not quite so bright, today it is believed, however, as it was yesterday. The bodies of the men are being taken to the barges tonight.
